

San Francisco's famed Leather Walk weaved its way through The City's streets starting on Sunday, September 21 at City Hall and ending up at Eagle Plaza for the raising of the Leather Pride flag.

Leatherwalk was, as usual, a fun time, with nearly every segment of the Leather community represented and walking in solidarity. All together nearly $6,000 was raised for the Leather Cultural District.

Flag during the SF Eagle's Leather Pride Fest.

THE LEATHER JOURNAL Page 6

Folsom Street Fair

This was merely the beginning of Folsom Street Fair week. The Fair itself was held on Sunday, September 28 – with all the usual suspects and more.

The usual vendors and volunteer organizations were there in modest weather. Steamworks had its huge stage with games, Mr. S had a huge store party, SF LDG and The 15 Association were everywhere as was ONYX and BLUF SF.

Leatherfolk could be spotted at restaurants all over San Francisco multitude of cuisines

The Folsom Street Fair originally started as a strategy to protect the neighborhood from real estate developers and now is the largest Leather in the world.

Word had it that an additional block was added this year on the east side of folsom Street.

The Folsom Street Fair originally started as a strategy to protect the neighborhood from real estate developers

Photos above by Dot, Pup Yoshi, Brian Dawson, Javon Bright and Dave Fong